DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC $ 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

In claim 2, the phrase "receiving" needs to be amended as -for receiving—or adapted to receive—to eliminate reference to method of operating the device.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

Art Unit: 1753

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 6 and 8-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over IKEDA et al. (5,445,798). IKEDA's invention is directed to a microbe propagation preventing apparatus by using ions. IKEDA discloses that the apparatus comprises an air duct 22 and an ionization chamber 23 disposed in the air duct, wherein the air duct 22 is made of an insulating material and the ionization chamber 23 includes a plurality of metallic needle electrodes 2 (col. 10, line 32-67). The differences between IKEDA and the instant claims are the detailing of mounting the needle electrode on a metal surface and intended use of the apparatus.

As to the former, IKEDA's Figs. 1 or 28 shows that the needle electrodes are disposed on a flat surface which in turn is disposed on the air duct, and are directly connected to a high voltage generator 4 via a lead or the metallic fine wires 101 are interconnected. As such, IKEDA contemplates the disposing of the plurality of needle electrodes on a metal surface for connecting to the high voltage generator.

As to the latter, the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified IKEDA's teachings because it has been held that on the intended use of apparatus that "apparatus claims cover what a device is, not what a device does",

Hewlett-Packard Co. v. Bausch & Lomb Inc., 15 USPQ 2d 1525 (Fed. Cir. 1990).

5. Claims 6-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over IKEDA et al. (5,445,798) in view of BECKMANN et al. (4,559,467). IKEDA's invention is directed to a microbe propagation preventing apparatus by using ions. IKEDA discloses that the apparatus comprises an air duct 22 and an ionization chamber 23 disposed in the air duct, wherein the air duct 22 is made of an insulating material and the ionization chamber 23 includes a plurality of metallic needle electrodes 2 (col. 10, line 32-67). The differences between IKEDA and the instant claims are the detailing of mounting the needle electrode on a metal surface and intended use of the apparatus.

Art Unit: 1753

As to the former, IKEDA's Figs. 1 or 28 shows that the needle electrodes are disposed on a flat surface which in turn is disposed on the air duct, and are directly connected to a high voltage generator 4 via a lead wire or the metallic fine wires 101 are interconnected. BECKMANN shows in a an ion generator the use of a plurality of needle electrodes 2 arranged on a support 8. The subject matter as a whole would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified IKEDA's teachings as shown by BECKMANN because this would result in connecting the plurality of needle electrode to a high voltage source via a lead wire and a metal surface.

As to the latter, the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified IKEDA's teachings because it has been held that on the intended use of apparatus that "apparatus claims cover what a device is, not what a device does", Hewlett-Packard Co. v. Bausch & Lomb Inc., 15 USPQ 2d 1525 (Fed. Cir. 1990).

As to the subject matter of claim 7, BECKMAN further shows that the support 8 has the cylindrical shape. The subject matter as a whole would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have modified IKEDA's teachings as shown by BECKMANN because the selection of any of known equivalent support shape would be within the level of ordinary skill in the art.

Conclusion

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. PROYNOFF (4,227,894) shows in an ion generator the provision of a plurality of needle electrodes on a support (see Figs. 1-10).
